Title: The Mecha View of the Universe

This book is my exposition of my theory of the mecha view of the universe we live in. I first began to formulate this theory in response to my investigations of the sacralige of the shrines of virtue. In my work on curing a patient caught in rather nasty situation I knew that to release this person from their trap called thanatonic cycling I would have to effect a major change in the fabric of our world. I chose to realign the great balance between chaos and order and also cleanse the shrines which I saw would be for the greater good.
While doing my research and searching for ways to thwart the desecration of one shrine by a drow bent on destruction I realized that the virtues and the shrines resembled a giant mecha or engine that drove our world. I believe that the shrines do not truly exist on this plane but the physical manifestations are simply a reflection of their nature expressed to the limited vision of us that exist in the material plane of this world. What truly drove the actions of both the order bound and the chaotic driven were actually a type of energy of unknown nature that compels our actions on some unknown level of our psyche. The transfer of attitudes and battles between the forces of light and darkness are in actuality the exchange of this energy that is part of the great balance.

While we strive to change this balance we are some odd way the fuel for the great engine of the balance. We in fact drive the forces that move this back and forth like some giant pendulum.

Some of my evidence is shown in both the shrines which act as rallying points of virtues and the anti shrines and places that create or spawn the monsters that inhabit our world. Too the way the forces seem without reason seem to always be at odds beyond the need to purge the world of any perceived evil. I see battles for battles sake and striving for strivings sake. Not always justified by even the justifications expounded by the various proponents of their position. Secondly I think that in fact most great battles end up as yet another phase of the great battle leads me to believe there are deeper forces at work. To what end this mecha exists is beyond my simple mind and investigations at this time. But I do believe that once we begin to understand this nature of our world we will for the first time have a glimpse of the face of reality in all it's glory. In some small way and not to overuse this but I think when I understand this mecha and the energies involved I will see a bit of the face of "God". I will finally understand why we are here and why this world and all the facets exist. And where maybe where we are headed.
